★ Highlights

★ Hopewell Earthworks
 These earthworks are actually a hilltop enclosure constructed nearly 2000 years ago by the Hopewell Culture. Known locally as "Fort Carlisle", they are a long winding mound of raised earth about 3 to 4 feet high. Now covered in deep forest, they are easy to miss, but fascinating to those interested in history. Future plans call for signage to identify and explain the site.

★ Scenic View
 Park at the Eby Road parking lot and venture a short distance east, out across the field, to discover a spectacular view of Twin Valley including Germantown, Carlisle, and Mia misburg. Rare grassland birds make this hilltop their home.
